I am delighted and honored to receive the 2020 Global Young Researcher Award, and thereby, join the 'wall of fame' with the eminent scholars in project management. I will always treasure this award as it is given by IPMA, which brings together researchers and practitioners to focus on the key themes in project management. I want to thank IPMA for this recognition, which presented me with numerous opportunities to reach out and connect to the global network of people in project management.

Outstanding Contribution 2020

In research, the opinion of peers is all decisive for the recognition and quality of your work. The IPMA Global Research Awards enables researchers to recognize meaningful contributions to the domain of project management, and also to be recognized as a meaningful contributor. By organizing the Global Research Awards, IPMA continues to demonstrate its commitment to developing the profession of project management, in order to allow people, organisations and societies to realise their visions of a great future. The award stimulates us to continue the further exploration of sustainability in project management.

A.J.G (Gilbert) Silvius
IPMA Research Award Outstanding Contribution 2020

The IPMA research award is one of the most prestigious awards in the field of Project Management. IPMA awarded my research for a first time in 2008, and this award enabled me getting a research grant of 1.3 million euro from Ghent University (Belgium). With that grant, I created a team of researchers to explore new research ideas between 2011 and 2019. The second IPMA award in 2020 couldn't come at a better time! It recognised once again the quality of my past research, and it certainly will stimulate my team to continue for another decade.
